

BRICKYARD PRIVACY POLICY

MEMBER'S INFORMATION

BRICKYARD collects personal and non-personal information from Member during the registration process. "Personal information" is any information that can be directly matched to a specific person without additional information, including, but not limited to, Member name or email address. "Non-personal information" is any information that BRICKYARD cannot be directly associated with a specific person without the aid of additional information. When Personal information is combined with Non-personal information, the collective information will be treated as Personal information.

Personal Information: Member can visit the BRICKYARD site without providing personal information, but to receive additional detailed information, such as the Membership agreement, you must provide your personal information, including your name and contact information. To become a Member, BRICKYARD requires you to provide personal information, including your name, telephone number, email address, postal address, payment and billing information, and company name (if applicable).

We may retain personal information for an indefinite amount of time to preserve our database and to comply with various federal and state laws.

Weblog Data: When you use the Site, BRICKYARD automatically receives and records certain information from your computer (or other device) and your browser. This may include such data as your IP address and domain name, the date and time of your visit, the URLs from the websites Member visits before and after navigating to the Site, Member's software and hardware attributes (including device IDs), your general geographic location (e.g. your city, state or metropolitan region), and certain cookie information (see below). To obtain such information, we may use web logs or applications that recognize Member's computer or other device and gather information about its online activity.

Cookies: We also use cookies on the Site. Cookies are small files that are stored on a computer or other device by a web browser. A cookie allows the Site to recognize whether the user has visited before and may store user preferences and other information. For example, cookies can be used to collect information about Member's use of the Site during your current session and over time (including the pages you view and the files you download), the computer's operating system and browser type, the Internet service provider, a domain name and IP address, the general geographic location, the website that visited before the Site and the link used to leave the Site. If Member is concerned about having cookies on Member's computer or device, Member may be able to set your browser to refuse all cookies or to indicate when a cookie is being set, allowing you to decide whether to accept it. You can also delete cookies from your computer or device. However, if Member choose to block or delete cookies, certain features of the Site may not operate correctly.

Web beacons: We also may use an application known as a "web beacon" (also known as a "clear gif" or a "web bug"). A web beacon is an electronic file that usually consists of a single-pixel image. It can be embedded in a web page or in an email to transmit information, which could include personal information. For example, it allows an email sender to determine whether a user has opened a particular email. We do not disclose to non-service-provider third parties any personal information that we collect in connection with web beacons. However, other websites that Member may link to through the Site also may use web beacons, so you should review other website operators' privacy policies to determine the type and extent of tracking devices used, and the information shared.
